

Several officers, with myself, accompanied Mr Dallas, and, after dining with him, went in the evening to one of the most beautiful Opera houses I had ever seen; where, it was said, there were more than three hundred persons on the stage at the same time—forty of them female dancers, not inferior in my opinion, to Madame Celeste.

It took me three hours and a half to walk through the water palace, and four to go through the armory. The latter place contains two hundred thousand stands of arms in perfect order, besides all the standards taken from the Turks. I saw several curiosities of the Emperor CATHARINE, and all the dresses worn by the Empress and Empresses, from the time of CATHARINE and PETER the Great, down to the present day. I visited some of the most splendid and richest churches, perhaps, in the world.

Whilst we remained at St Petersburg, one of the Emperor's sons accompanied us every where, and extended to us every civility and attention in his power. It would have taken me several months to have indulged my curiosity. I need not add, that I was exceedingly pleased with my visit, and highly gratified at the attentions paid me.

BOSTON MORNING POST.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1837.

Washington, Sept. 28, 1837.

9 o'clock, P. M.

To-night, at about seven o'clock, the previous question on the bill to suspend the Depository Act, was demanded by Mr. Calhoun, of New Hampshire. It was carried by vote taken by tellers. Ayes 107, Noes 78.

The question, shall the main question be now put, taken by ayes and noes. Result, ayes 124, noes 102.

On the main question, shall the bill be ordered to a third reading, ayes and noes demanded. Result, ayes 119, noes 117.

Mr. Pickens moved a re-consideration, to be voted on tomorrow.

Yours truly,

CONSIDER STANDISH.

Washington City, Sept. 30, 1837.

The Depository Bill, or the Bill to suspend the payment of the Fourth Installment of the distribution act until Jan. 1839, was passed last night, at 12 o'clock with Pickens's amendment, by a majority of 12 votes. All attempts at amendment, or modification, and of destruction, that could be made were successfully voted down, and at half past twelve o'clock, the bill, thank God, was passed.

Mr. Bell, at 10 o'clock, made the last desperate effort of a desperate man, to defeat the measure, but was unsuccessful. If the bill had not been passed last night, or had not been carried to-day, the Secretary of the Treasury would, on Monday next, have been compelled to call on the States, for a return of the instalments that have previously been paid them under the Distribution act. To attain this object was the study of the opposition, and if they had been successful, they would have raised a beautiful cry about oppression, and the disposition of the administration to ROB THE PEOPLE of their money. They have been defeated, and the good sense of the people has triumphed. As matters now stand, the Treasury will be enabled to keep up its operations, and claimants on the country will be enabled to get their pay.

Mr. Cambreleng's resolution, that it is not now expedient to charter a National Bank, came up this morning, and Mr. John Sargent, has delivered a speech in favor of chartering a Bank, at some subsequent period. I must admit the ability of Mr. Sargent, though I cannot exactly swallow all his doctrines. Mr. John Robinson, of Virginia, moved an amendment to the resolution, declaratory that it will not be expedient to charter a Bank of the United States, till Congress is authorized to do so, by an amendment of the Constitution. Before any debate was had, the orders of the day were demanded, and a bill to authorize the issue of Treasury Notes was taken up in Committee of the Whole. Mr. J. Q. Adams, objected to taking up the bill, on the ground that it was a bill to raise Revenue, and that it originated in the Senate, and therefore ought not to be acted on because of the Constitutional objection, which requires that all bills of the kind shall originate in the House. On this question, a debate ensued which got the house in a snarl, from which it finally escaped by the prompt decision of Mr. Comer, of North Carolina, who, as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, decided that the bill was legitimate and not a bastard.

The bill is now in process of dissection and will probably be hammered and hammered till a variety of infant school speeches are hung upon it. The bill ought to pass without the least possible delay, if the merchants of the country hope to be relieved by any act of the American Congress. But I must close, for the Express Mail soon departs. Yours truly, &c.

CONSIDER STANDISH.

P. S. Mr. Cambreleng stated to-day, and stated truly, that the great decline that has been had in the price of specie, originated in the expectation that Congress will speedily issue Treasury Notes, that will answer all the purpose of remittance to England.

Washington, Saturday evening, Sept. 30, 1837.

In the year 232 B. C. on a fine sunny morning—it was long before the birth of Deacon Mudge—one Lucius, a Roman, who wore "a marken hat and cocked up breeches," met Portius, another Roman, near the palace of Cato, and said to him—how are you? What's the news? Why, a considerable, replied Portius; I'm all of a sweat! "Hold up your gun up," said Lucius, "and don't be bothering! Out with my darling, and let's know what's what." Says Portius says he, and he pulled up the waistband of his breeches as he said it.

"Mistaken on mistoful!" grief on grief! My brother Marcus—

He was going to say a good deal more, but Lucius interrupted him before he could get it out, with

"Ha! what has he done? Has he forsaken his post? Has he given way? Did he look tamely on and let them pass?"

"No sir," said Portius, "but Oppressed with multitudes, he gently fell."

For the truth of this historical reminiscence, I appeal to Rollin and Addison; and I was reminded of it to-day, when Mr. Clay's second Lieutenant of the Tower rose in the House to-day, and proposed an amendment to Mr. Cambreleng's resolution, which amendment declared that it is not now expedient to charter a National Bank, and that it will not be expedient to do so, till Congress has power vested in it to do so, by an amendment of the Constitution by the American people!

Mr. Robinson is a whig of the double school, and by this one act, has thrown a whole tub of cold water on Mr. Clay and the Bank party. He is quoted the whigs, and set up for himself. When Mr. John Robinson did this act, Mr. John Bell, who is Mr. Clay's third Lieutenant, put on his hat, looked "short the distance," and went into the refectory. It was the unkindest cut of all, and Bell could not stand it.

The Treasury note bill was discussed in committee of the Whole till half past 2 o'clock, when it seemed that no progress would be had, and the committee rose, and the House adjourned till Monday.

The Senate has had a long debate on the Sub-Treasury Bill. Preston has spoken four hours, and abused Calhoun, and gone to Clay. If he don't mind his P's and Q's he'll go to pot. Nothing effected in the Senate, except to pass the Depository Bill, as amended by the House. Amen.

CONSIDER STANDISH.

Mr. Parmenter has proved true to his republican principles in voting against the payment of the fourth installment of the surplus revenue. The federalists are consistent in urging the government to borrow money to distribute, for the cardinal point of their creed is, that a "national debt is a national blessing." A national debt enables the aristocracy to invest their wealth in perfectly safe funds, and to extort from the mass of the people an ample and sure interest for their money, without risk or trouble. This would be very convenient for them, but oppressive to the people. It would be mortgaging the whole country to the aristocracy to secure them against loss in the investment of their funds; and thus withdraw capital from those works of art, enterprise, and industry, to the promotion of which it is now necessarily devoted. The wealth of the country is now employed to enrich the country, and hence benefit all its inhabitants—create a national debt, and it will be used to impoverish the country, and thus injure all its inhabitants. In short, a national debt would convert our capitalists into mere stock-jobbers, instead of leaving them to seek employment for their money in factories, railroads, agriculture, commerce, and all those great branches of business which alone give strength, prosperity, and true independence, to a nation. Mr. Parmenter could not have voted to compel government to raise money for the purpose of distribution—as he would have done, had he voted for the payment of the fourth installment—without violating every principle which has governed his political action since he arrived at the age of manhood; and that he is found opposing at Washington the very men whom a sense of his duty to his country has always compelled him to oppose at home, is evidence of the correctness of his conduct. His friends rejoice in witnessing his firmness, and will sustain him in faithfully discharging his public duties. He stands alone, the only true Representative of the democracy of Massachusetts in the Halls of Congress.

The City Guards, under Ex-Ordery Sergeant Charles Trull, turned out with very full ranks, for target practice yesterday. The field selected for the display of skill was in the rear of Dorchester Heights, and the target was raised close to the water's edge, and at a distance of sixty paces from the line. Notwithstanding that the wind was very high, the firing was, perhaps, the best ever made by the Company. Three rounds were fired, and the target was pierced in fifty-four places. The Philadelphia Medal for the best shot was declared to be won by Mr. John Center, and was awarded to him accordingly. The second best shot was made by Sergeant Ezra Trull, Jr., who, on two former occasions, carried off the medal. The third best shot was by Mr. Charles C. Smith.

These matters being determined, the Band were invited to try the "shooting irons," and their work was not inferior to the regulars. Simonds played a ball nearer the centre of the circle than any other marksman on the field; and Wynn loaded so sharp, and let drive so hard, that he knocked the target head over heels, and this exploit put an end to the shooting part of the exercises.

As the line was about forming to retire, it was discovered that "Black Sam," the Deputy-Assistant Commissary General of Subsistence had deserted, and a detachment was dispatched to pursue him. He was captured in the swamp, and brought back—an achievement fully on a par with some recent victories over the Indians in Florida. Sam was tried on a drum-head court martial, and found guilty of desertion, and sentenced to be imprisoned in a ring, and to dance and sing half an hour for the amusement of the Company. The sentence was enforced in its utmost rigor, after which he was permitted to de camp, and the Guards took up their line of march to Gen. Davis's new house in Front street, South Boston, where they partook of an elegant collation.

A late letter from Paris says—"In theatricals we have been enlivened by a new comedy at the Theatre Francaise, in which the inimitable Mademoiselle Mars performs the leading part. This wonderful actress has kept possession of the stage for nearly half a century, and still carries away the palm even in the most juvenile parts; indeed such are the charms of her acting, that the French seem generally disposed to allow that Mademoiselle Mars on the stage is what every French woman of fashion might wish to be in the saloon—at once dignified, elegant, graceful, and naive."

Governor Ritner, of Pennsylvania, has offered a reward of two hundred dollars for the apprehension of one John Rox, for the murder of Patrick Kelly, committed in the district of Kensington. The following is the description of said Rox. He is about "forty years of age—six feet high—broad made—light complexion, and quick of speech and expression."

"The Bride of Genoa," by Epes Sargent, Esq., will be played to-night at the Tremont. The cast for this evening is better than that under which it was performed last season, and notwithstanding its success then, we anticipate for it increased popularity on the present occasion.

Much comment has been excited in the fashionable world by a clause in the will of the late Duchess of St. Albans stipulating that should Lord Frederick Beauchamp, or other members of the Duke's family, reside with him more than five days at a time, the income assigned him shall "pass out of his hands, as if he were dead."

George Osborne, a lad 16 years of age, son of Mr. Jonathan Osborne, was knocked overboard by the boom of a small sail-boat, in Salem harbor, on Monday afternoon, and drowned. Two younger lads were in the same boat, who were unable to manage her so as to render any aid to the unfortunate deceased.

POLICE COURT.

Juvenile Shop Breakers.—On Monday night, the butcher's shop, kept by Mr. Samuel Howard, Chamber street, was entered by two lads, and from five to eight dollars were stolen from the desk. About 11 o'clock, a colored lad, lodging in a barber's shop, next door, heard an unusual noise in the butcher's place, and placed his ear to a crack in the partition. Presently the young prize, by the aid of a "lico foco," raised a light, and set to work, and the colored boy was clearly able to recognize the features of John Flynn, who was taken by one of Mr. Howard's hands as he was leaving the yard, and handed him over to the Watch. Flynn solemnly denied the whole charge, but failed to convince the Court of his innocence, and was sent to the House of Correction, to the great grief of his weeping and beseeching parents.

Rachel McNaught had a fine narrowly face, and a very lame leg. She was advised to get a bottle of rum, and rub the swelling with it. She did so, and construed the prescription, as she "understood it;" that is, she drank the rum, and rubbed her shin with the bottle.

Matilda Whitney—(O, that such a liquid name as Matilda should come to sorrow, or shame)—had frequently been a grateful recipient of Court beneficence, and she vowed she was almost ashamed to solicit further aid, but situated as she was, she felt constrained to ask one last and dying favor—the privilege of spending the sad remnant of her days in the House of Correction, where she thought she might yet be of some use to her fellow creatures. The Court thought she might change her mind about dying there, after another residence for six months, and therefore restricted the sentence to that period.

The Merchants Bank Case.—The opinion of the Supreme Judicial Court, upon the application of the Bank Commissioners, for an injunction upon the Merchants Bank of this city, was delivered yesterday afternoon, by Chief Justice Duffee. Further action upon the subject was postponed until the first Monday in December next. In the mean time it was presumed, by the Court, that the circulation of the Bank would be reduced to what it was "in sound business times." The Court expressed its full confidence in the solvency of the Bank, and in the integrity of the Directors. We shall be able to give the opinion of the Court, at length, to-morrow, and till then defer any further remarks.

We understand that the circulation of the Bank on Saturday last was $90,249 50—having been reduced nearly $20,000 since the day on which the injunction was applied for.—Providence Journal.

Destructive Fire at Natchez.—Besides the yellow fever, which the late intelligence (New Orleans) says to the 24th ult.) states to be desolating this city, there occurred on the night of the 14th ult. a destructive fire, beginning in a tin shop the lower part of Main street, originating, it is supposed in a cooking stove. It spread with rapidity down Main street, destroying the two story brick building of Wm. B. Dicks & Co., occupied as a saddler's, and the brick store adjoining of Mr. Hastings, upholsterer, also the drug store of Dr. Cornell. The outhouses and kitchen attached to the above were also swept away, and the cotton shed of Messrs. Sprague & Howell, with its ware.—Total loss is estimated at $60,000.—N. Y. Star.

Forrest is playing nightly to very full houses at the Park. His Richard III., last Monday night, was one of the grandest histrionic displays seen in Old Drury for years. DEMOCRATIC MEETING IN CHARLESTOWN.

A meeting of the friends of the National Administration, in Charlestown, Middlesex County, Mass., held pursuant to public notice, at the Eagle Hotel, in said town, on the 1st day of October, 1837, for the election of seven delegates to the ensuing Convention at Lowell, to select Senatorial candidates for the ensuing Congress—

Wm. Monroe, Esq., was called to the Chair, and N. H. Loring, appointed Secretary.

Mr. Loring offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the faithful fidelity of certain individuals in Congress, hitherto claiming to be democrats, to the true democratic doctrines, with respect to banks and banking, which doctrines are illustrated with singular perspicuity and strength in the recent message of the President, renders it proper that an amendment should distinctly express his sentiments with respect to that element; therefore,

Resolved, That this meeting will support no person for a political office, who is opposed to the message of President Van Buren.

Resolved, That the delegates elected this evening, be instructed to support no man as a candidate for the office of Senator, who is in favor of the present system of banking, who is not opposed to the re-chartering of old, and the chartering of new banks; and who is not willing to use all its powers to separate all banking establishments, of whatever kind, from all connection with the Government.

Resolved, That we approve of the strong indignant condemnation recently passed by the venerated Jackson, in a letter from Tennessee, upon the conduct of the Depository Banks.

Resolved, That a full copy of these resolutions be made by the Secretary, and duly authenticated by the Chairman of this meeting, and presented by the Delegates before the County Convention.

On motion of Mr. Sawyer, a committee of seven were appointed to select a list of eleven delegates for the consideration of the meeting.

The committee reported the names which follow, and the gentlemen were elected without opposition, viz:

Jonathan Locke, W. H. Bacon, John Roney, Richard Nichols, Seth W. Lewis, Thomas G. Cullen, Ichabod Lindsey, C. E. Gage, Thos J. Elliott, R. Frothingham, Jr., N. H. Loring.

By order of the meeting, ADJAH MONROE, Chairman.

N. H. LORING, Clerk.

REVIEW OF THE BOSTON MARKET

FOR THE WEEK ENDING TUESDAY, OCT. 3.

ASHES.—There continues to be an active demand for Pearls at 4 1/2 and 5, and Puts at 5—the supplies of the latter are quite limited.

BEANS.—A plentiful supply of foreign being offered in the market, prices are less.

CANDLES.—There remains a limited supply of the old stock of Moulds, and manufacturers are waiting for colder weather, but prices continue depressed—recent sales of tallow at 9 1/2 and 10, and tallow at 12 1/2 and 13 1/2.

COAL.—There continues to be a constant increase of supplies from the Provinces, and cargo sales have been made at a reduction on last quotations. English Coals are in better demand, but prices continue depressed—recent sales of tallow at 9 1/2 and 10, and tallow at 12 1/2 and 13 1/2.

COFFEE.—A more active demand has been experienced, but without producing any favorable influence on prices—recent sales of tallow at 9 1/2 and 10, and tallow at 12 1/2 and 13 1/2.

COTTON.—A sale of 100 bales choice New Orleans was made at 14, 6 mos. and 100 do. Uplands, various grades, 10 1/2 and 11 1/2. The market is quite limited, particularly of prime quality—a few bales common have been taken for shipping since our last.

DUCK.—Holders firm, and some are asking for heavy salt cloth above our extreme quotations—sales of 3 1/2 and 4 1/2 have been reported.

GRAIN.—The principal dealers are not disposed to purchase to any great extent, having ample supplies on hand to meet the existing demand—which has of late been very limited. Cargo sales white Corn have been made at 94 and 95, and yellow at 102 and 103 per bush. The stock of Oats is quite large and prices are lower than previously quoted—sales of new North River Rye 75c per bushel.

HOPS.—The market is firm but sales are confined to the immediate wants of manufacturers, for whom about 40 tons of 1837 hops were taken in lots at $215 per ton, and outshot $27 1/2 and 28 do—a small parcel of half clean was taken at $7 1/2 per cwt. in 6 mos.

HIDES.—Sales 4000 California for New York market at 11c, on 3 mos.—1300 Pernambuco in lots, 9c per lb. in 6 mos.

IRON.—Sales all descriptions since our last, consists of 3 1/2 and 4 1/2, and 102 per bush. The stock of Oats is quite large and prices are lower than previously quoted—sales of new North River Rye 75c per bushel.

LEAD.—Market improving, sales Pig at 5 and Sheet 6c per lb.

LEATHER.—A public sale of about 3000 sides sole of New York was made on Saturday, at 15 1/2 and 16 1/2.

MEATS.—The transactions since our last, consists of 3 1/2 and 4 1/2, and 102 per bush. The stock of Oats is quite large and prices are lower than previously quoted—sales of new North River Rye 75c per bushel.

FRUIT.—Sales 2 1/2 and 3 1/2, and 102 per bush. The stock of Oats is quite large and prices are lower than previously quoted—sales of new North River Rye 75c per bushel.

NAVAL STORES.—The market continues firm with a good demand and small supplies.

PLASTER PARIS.—Sales of this article for Southern markets at 1 1/2 and 1 3/4.

PROVISIONS.—The transactions of the week have been to a fair extent at the reduced quotations—$13 for foreign Mess Beef, and $14 for City Beef. Pork is in more demand, and prices a shade better. Sales Boston Lard at 9c, and 10c per lb. in 6 mos.

SHEETINGS.—A sale of 500 pieces has been made at 9 1/2 and 10 1/2.

SUGAR.—The sales of the week consist of 400 lbs Havana and Trinidad brown at 4 1/2 and 5 1/2, and 104 1/2 and 11 1/2 per lb. in 6 mos. and 100 do. Uplands, various grades, 10 1/2 and 11 1/2.

TALLOW.—Firm market, and ready sales for prime candle tallow—contracts for delivering of rough have been made at 8 1/2 and 9 1/2, which is an advance on late operations.

WOLLS.—Sales of sufficient importance to establish regular quotations—and prices reported are in a great measure uncertain.

For Prices Current see Last Page.

BOSTON LECTURE.—The Inaugural Lecture in the course of the evening will be delivered by GOV. EVERETT, on THURSDAY EVENING, Oct. 12th, at the Opera, to commence at 7 o'clock.

Arrangements for subsequent lectures have been made with the following gentlemen, viz:—H. R. Cleveland, Esq. of Boston. Rev. John C. Hays, of New Bedford.—Two Lectures "on the life and times of Oliver Cromwell."
